Amy,

I spoke with Craig yesterday in regards to the reasoning for the cost changes on the water tower project. I explained some of the major reasons to him and he requested that I put the justification in writing. I am going to refer to the expenses/costs in my below description.

The original price had $236,700 in foundation expenses and $160,000 in steel expenses. This pricing was stated in an email that we had to have authorization to proceed by Dec 1 in order for us to hold that pricing. We felt that we would be able to finish the foundation in around 3 weeks as the weather forecast was phenomenal for this time of year. We also felt that we could get steel expedited in time as to be able to have our erection crew start building the base cone on January 2.

The second price had $287,200 in foundation expenses and $160,000 in steel expenses. This pricing was based off of a phone conversation with Amy and Craig that they were hoping to have authorization to proceed by the end of day on Dec 5. The foundation subcontractor went through his pricing again and found that he had missed some items and he also accrued for more rentals. He missed $9,500 for having to re-excavate center of hole after he has to fill a bunch of it back in and also having to form/pour a new rat slab. He also missed $25,000 for some rental expenses that he didn't account for previously and also accrued for additional rental time. So essentially $34,500 of these additional expenses should have been in the original price and $16,000 were added to adjust from the Dec 1 to Dec 5 time frame.

The third price has $327,200 in foundation expenses and $204,200 in steel expenses. This pricing was based off of an email stating that we may not get authorization to move forward until next week so we figured this pricing based on having a go-ahead by Dec 15.

The additional pricing for the foundation expenses accounted for another week and a half of stand-by and rental expenses. This also pushes the construction of the foundation from Dec 18 to probably mid-January. We are assuming that the weather will take a turn and our previous estimate of 3 weeks to complete will be more like 4 to 5 weeks so we are figuring additional expenses for being on site longer. We are also taking into account the anticipated snow/wind that will have to be dealt with. So essentially about $15,000 of these additional expenses were added to adjust from the Dec 5 to Dec 15 timeline and about $25,000 of these additional expenses were to account for an additional week of labor plus weather issues.

The additional steel expenses are based on the decision that we now won't be able to get the foundation installed and the steel purchased/fabricated/blasted/painted/delivered in time as to not hold up our field crew. It will be more cost effective to have the steel crew leave and return in the spring versus staying on site and having a month of standby. The main additional expenses for the steel are based on $36,000 for demobilization and remobilization of the rig/crew and also $23,000 for renting a crawler crane when we come back to site in the spring.

My previous breakdowns and this description are hopefully what you need in regards to this issue. But please be aware that there are extensive issues and costs that go into the redesign and construction of this situation. Also combined with the timing, delays, and weather; there are substantial expenses that go into this project change order. Please let me know if there is anything else that you need from me. I will wait to hear back from you.

Thanks.

Amy,

We have had many conversations both internally and externally (with subs & suppliers). Due to the delays taking a little longer, we have gone ahead and figured the below pricing to cover us through 12/15 and that pricing is below. With the current situation of this project and the impact of these dates, it will not be possible to finish the foundation and also complete the purchasing/fabrication of new steel in time as to not delay our erection crew. The foundation crew will continue with the piers and foundation through the winter but they would still like to start back again as soon as possible to try and take advantage of the nice weather. The erection crew will finish assembling the ball of the tank, and then they will go ahead and demobilize and then remobilize back in the spring to finish erection. This will be the most cost-efficient way to address this issue rather than factoring in a bunch more standby time for our erection crew and winter weather costs.

Please feel free to respond back to this email or give me a call to discuss any questions. We will wait to hear back for direction.
